Jury Fails to Fix Blame.

Coroner Rudolph Davis Saturday morning held an inquiry into the cause of the death of Calvin Elam, who was killed by a fall from a telephone pole at the corner of Seventh street and Higgins Avenue. A number of witnesses were examined, and a thorough inquiry made into the possible cause of Elam being thrown from the pole by an electric shock. Before rendering a verdict the jury which was comprised of R. M. Harris, W. A. Thomson, F. P. Lowry, C. J. Lancaster and Wm. Remington visited the scene and made a thorough survey of the pole and the wire which lead to it, but in the verdict failed to fix the blame. The verdict of the jury is as follows:

"We, the jury, find that the body found at the foot of the telephone pole in Paris, Ky., at the corner of Seventh street and Higgins Avenue, on April 4, 1911, was the body of Calvin Elam, also we find that there was a live wire on the pole from which Calvin Elam fell and was killed, but the cause of his death is unknown to us."
